Letters to the Editor
The State Must Pay the Jury.
Mr. Editor: It is an old saying that "He who dances must pay for the fiddler."

But evil of the most excessive character may be trotted out in court, (as has been in a case for the past seven or eight days in this city,) and a band of twelve jurymen, among whom there is often at least one country fiddler, must be paid by the State.

And yet it is threatened by one of the counsel in the case just tried that there will be a repetition of the disgusting performance before another court.

For heaven's sake, and for the sake of common decency may we have on Union square at the public expense, in place of the performance of fango, modified so that it shall have a trace of modesty and a suggestion of chastity, and let it be open to all who "take their true love's long hair" as in the innocent old-fashioned country barn dance, when all who danced had to pay for the fiddler and didn't get home till morning.

No wonder that we in "the land of steady habits" are now compelled to pay a state tax and that the public patience has been taxed in this fast-going age too much already, for any of the parties in such a case as the one cited to expect an encore.

Courts of this sort is expensive any way, with or without caramels; but the band of twelve that is supposed to "make music" for one of the interested parties should not be paid by the state, except it be in "wooden nutmegs."

CROSSING ATLANTIC IN THIRTEEN HOURS.

What Dr. Alexander G. Bell Has to Say About the Flight.

(Special to The Bulletin.)
Washington D. C., July 3.—The possibility of a trans-Atlantic ocean flight in a heavier-than-air machine in 13 hours is pointed out in a communication to the National Geographic society at Washington, D. C., from Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone and former president of the society.

"The distance from Newfoundland to Ireland is less than 2,000 miles," says Dr. Bell. "This means that if you go at 100 miles an hour you will cross the Atlantic in 20 hours—less than a day. We have flying machines that go at a greater speed than that. We already have machines that could cross the engine if their engines can keep going for 20 hours. Of course, these are exceptional machines; but even the ordinary machines of today make 50 miles an hour with ease.

"Now, a flying machine flies faster as you go higher up, because the rarer air offers less resistance to the motion, while the propeller gives the same push with the same power, whatever the elevation. As you get into the rarier air the propeller gives around faster. A 50 mile an hour machine flying two miles high in the air—and we have machines that have gone twice as high as that—will fly much faster than 50 miles an hour.

Then at an elevation of two miles high in the air there is a constant wind blowing in the general direction of Europe, having a velocity anywhere from 25 to 50 miles an hour.

"As a net result of all these things, there can be little doubt that any ordinary machine that is able to support itself in the air at an elevation of two miles high will attain a speed of at least 100 miles an hour in the direction of Europe, and that means going from America to Europe in a single day. Calculation shows that, taking all these circumstances into consideration, best machines should be able to cross the Atlantic in 13 hours. I hardly dare say it aloud for publication. It is sufficiently startling to know that it is not only possible, but probable, that the passage may be made in a single day. But if, as I imagine, it can be done in 13 hours, you may take an early breakfast in Newfoundland and a late dinner in Ireland the same night."

New Britain—The postal savings bank business continues to grow. F. S. Cadwell, who is in charge of this branch of the post office, reported to Postmaster Ira B. Hicke yesterday that the deposits amounted to $47,200.
